The KIDS ONLY Collection

This Collection is specially created for kids. But of course if your inner child is calling, you're more than welcome to enjoy the ride.

Let's start with a sculpture called Torso in Metal from 'The Rock Drill' made by Sir Jacob Epstein. It is the top half of a body that is made from bronze and has been made to look a bit like a robot. Can you stand in the same position as the sculpture? If this sculpture came to life, how would it move?

Here's a beautiful horse and a nasty lion. How many other animals can you find in this room?

What's your favourite colour? Have a look at this painting of a spring garden by Patrick Heron and pick which colour flower you like the best.

Step in front of John Brett's The British Channel Seen from the Dorsetshire Cliffs. How many ships can you see on the sea in the actual painting? Where have they been? Where are they going? Make up an adventure story from what you can see.

There are lots of interesting details in this picture of Queen Elizabeth I. What patterns can you see on her dress?

At the weekends and holidays you can come to the Art Trolley and get your picture taken. It's got all sorts of weird and wonderful art materials for you to play with, including coloured spots.

Finally, if you've still got the energy, there's a Tate Boat that runs every forty minutes between Tate Britain and the other gallery Tate Modern. See if you can spot the London Eye, the Houses of Parliament and St Paul's Cathedral. The boat goes really fast!
